You will head to Bartlesville for our introduction to Oil Barons by visiting the Oklahoma Centennial Project to see a working replica of Oklahoma's first commercial oil well and view a 19th century cable tool drilling rig in operation. Oklahoma oil began on March 25, 1897 when the Nellie Johnstone No. 1 oil well came in a gusher on the banks of the Caney River. The news of oil in commercial quantities at Bartlesville, Indian Territory, in the Cherokee Nation just east of the Osage Nation, prompted the Santa Fe Railway to lay track to town site. You will enjoy lunch at a local favorite, Frank and Lola's.

The next stop Woolaroc is the summer home of Frank Phillips, founder of Phillips 66. Located in the middle of Indian Territory, Frank and his brother hit the first "big gusher". You can tour the ranch house and the natural surroundings illustrated by its name.

Experience the sumptuous town residence of oil baron Frank Phillips, founder of Phillips Petroleum Company. Although the house itself is beautiful and ornate with rich imported Philippine mahogany, handcrafted molded ceilings, and Waterford crystal chandeliers, it is the original furnishings left by the Phillips family that make this tour an experience to remember.

Phillips Petroleum Company Museum is our last stop in Bartlesville, you will be inspired by the story of Phillips' transformation from a small Bartlesville business to a global energy enterprise, and the extraordinary people who made it happen. During your tour experience the thrill of Billy Parker flying overhead in an original 1914 Pusher plane, and Phillips' breakthrough discovery that helped fuel the Hula Hoop craze.

You will head back to Claremore for mile high pie and dinner at Hammett House before you head home the next day.
